Speed tester awards GTA 'Best Mobile Coverage in Guam'

Ookla, a global leader in internet testing, has recognized GTA as the provider of the "Best Mobile Coverage in Guam" for the first and second quarters of 2019.

Ookla provides mobile and broadband network intelligence, testing applications and technology, and is the company behind Speedtest.net. Speedtest by Ookla is a way for consumers to measure and provide insight into the speed and quality of mobile and fixed broadband connections.

The company stated it has 8,590 speed-testing centers across the globe.

GTA in a statement said it is pleased with the award.

"We have made strategic investments of over $5 million in 2019 to optimize network performance to meet growing demands of our customers," Roland Certeza, GTA president and CEO, said in a press release.

He acknowledged Ookla for its commitment to provide information that will help providers such as GTA improve access to the internet for their subscribers.

Speed test

Speedtest.net allows consumers to measure and provide insight into the speed and quality of their online connection.

"Our company remains committed to building, enhancing and modernizing our wireless network," Certeza stated.

Awards criteria

Ookla Coverage Awards are based on the user's mobile experience with their cellular network, and incorporate a measure of each provider's availability and footprint within the country. The findings are determined using data from coverage scans, which capture the real-time network conditions of Android Speedtest users across the globe.

GTA operates a 4G LTE wireless network, high-speed internet, digital television, local and long-distance phone service. The company also delivers carrier-class data circuits along with operating a cable landing station for the Southeast Asia-U.S. cable consortium.

Hacker accesses 100M Capital One applications

By Devlin Barrett
 The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Capital One, the Virginia-based bank with a popular credit card business, announced Monday that a hacker had accessed about 100 million credit card applications, and investigators say thousands of Social Security and bank account numbers were also taken.

The FBI has arrested a Seattle-area woman, Paige Thompson, on a charge of computer fraud and abuse, according to court records.

The hack appears to be one of the largest data breaches ever to hit a financial services firm. In 2017, the credit-reporting company Equifax disclosed that hackers had stolen the personal information of 147 million people. Last week, it reached a $700 million settlement with U.S. regulators over that breach.

"While I am grateful that the perpetrator has been caught, I am deeply sorry for what has happened," said Richard Fairbank, Capital One's chairman and chief executive. "I sincerely apologize for the understandable worry this incident must be causing those affected and I am committed to making it right."
